I understand that there is a discussion paper that might dictate that some given portion of a charities funds must be spent according to legislation or regulation.

This is totally unacceptable. I donate to environmental charities that advocate to prevent environmental damage. Cleaning up damage is important but that should be paid for by the agents that caused by the damage, or by the government who allowed, or whose predecessors allowed, the damage to occur.

There should be no limits on environmental groups to advocate for proper environmental outcomes.

The damage to the environment through climate change cannot be stopped through remediation - prevention is much more important.
