Financial assistance

In its inquiry on industry assistance in 2006-07, the Productivity Commission (PC) notes that assistance enjoyed by one industry or activity typically comes at a cost to other industries and activities across the economy. The PC notes that in general, government intervention may be warranted when assistance is shown to be beneficial for the community as a whole, rather than just for a narrow group of participants; and assistance is provided to address genuine and significant market failures.
