Section 22

1
	Box 1.1: Regulatory treatment of the 'sharing economy' — the example of ' Uber '		Deleted: UBER
	Uber is a platform for ride-sharing services that connects passengers directly with the drivers of		Deleted: UBER vehicles. Cars are reserved by sending a text message or using a smartphone app.
	This type of 'on-demand ride-sharing' was not envisaged when laws governing the taxi industry were drawn up The regulatory response to this innovative development has varied across jurisdictions.
	Internationally, the response to Uber has been quite different from that in Australia. California was		Deleted: UBER
	the first jurisdiction to recognise and regulate services such as Uber , creating a new category of		Deleted: UBER regulation for 'transportation network companies' (TNCs). The regulation of TNCs covers driver background checks, driver training, drug and alcohol policies, minimum insurance coverage and company licensing.
	Australian regulators have yet to demonstrate such flexibility and openness to new modes of business. Transport authorities in NSW have declared Uber X non-compliant with the Passenger		Deleted: UBER
	Transport Act 1990. The Panel understands, however, that the NSW Government is considering its response to ride-sharing services, assessing the benefits to consumers alongside the impact on the taxi industry.
1	The Victorian Taxi Service Commission has fined unlicensed Uber drivers in that state. Fines of up		Deleted: UBER
	to $1,700 per driver have been issued, but Uber has pledged to pay the fines on behalf of its		Deleted: UBER
•	drivers.		Deleted. OBER
	The South Australian Government has stated that those providing transport services that do not comply with government regulations are acting in breach and will face severe financial penalties.
Section 22
•	2011011 22
	Part 1 — Context for the Review Page 1	4	