As an 82 year old Australian and a former School science teacher and co-ordinator, I have always been dismayed by the lack of basic understanding of scientific principles by politicians of both major parties.

They generally have degrees in law and little else. As a result Australia, the country that receives more sunshine than most other countries in the world has never capitalised on this bounty. Instead, the interests of polluting industries is preferred. (The sun does not make political donations,).

The governments proposal of forcing Environmental groups to devoid themselves of 50% of their funds is nothing else but Nazism. I will do whatever I can to prevent this draconian law being enacted.
