

In the light of the banks bigger profits and their lack of transparency in relation to derivative trading, I would like to make a submission to David Murray's Financial System Inquiry.

I strongly suspect the Government's intention to implement Bail-in of punters savings to rescue the Too-Big-To Fail banks in their desperate time of need (at the G20 meeting in Brisbane 2014).

I urge the government powers to implement a Glass-Steagall separation of ordinary commercial and retail type banking from speculative banking.

Hopefully through this Inquiry the punters of Australia will not be hung, quartered and shot-down for suggesting financial mess we find ourselves in.
