

Banks that choose to make wild gambles in leveraged trades and derivative trades are Not adding energy to our economy.

They are not helping Australians' use their talent. They are not making a physical economy.

Australia must re-introduce a Glass Steagall type legislation to protect legitimate banks and bankers' deposits.

Australia should not designate that bail-in or bail-out will be used to save big 4 banks, that in turn have foreign part owners and put their money in hazardous and non productive speculation.

Australia must create a new National bank, as a lender of last resort, as a lender to the physical infrastructure, as a leader in terms of rates for mortgages, farmers rates, business lending and financier of national infrastructure projects.

Australians are tired of underwriting private banks that do not serve Australia itself.
