

Governments support corrupt banking – Shame

When I was growing up the financial system was thriving. Now that I'm in the 60th year of my life I've watched the economy of this LUCKY country being eroded over the last 30 years. Policies between banks and governments have been to the benefit of investment banking, which needs to be separated from depositors' savings. The ordinary citizens are the ones who built this LUCKY country and we are being sold out. Gambling with depositors' money is immoral and breaks one of the ten commandments: 'Thou shalt not steal'. We know what bail-in legislation will do to a nation. We can see by what's happened in Cyprus. Bring Glass-Steagall in and watch the real economy thrive once more. Let's get productive industry back on its feet in this fine country of ours, and let the speculators fend for themselves.

Gillian Williams, Swan Hill, Vic.