

The Banks need to be kept in check via legislation.

The current financial situation is entirely the fault of the de-regulation of the banking system and the purposeful demolishing of legislation (like Glass-Steagal) so as to increase their immediate profit margin at the expense of the communities and their own future. CEOs of Corporations like banks need to be responsible for their corporation's crimes. This will stop the corporation's primary interest from being profits only, effectively forcing them to become good citizens.

No business is 'too big to fail'. The unfettered trashing of de-regulation gives them enormous lobbying power and causes corruption to become endemic in any parliament. If left unchecked, these banking corporations will destroy our communities with their greed and hunt for profits.

1, Bring back Glass-Steagal

2, Enact legislation making Officers of corporations, including Chief Executive Officers personally liable and responsible for the actions of their corporations.
