To Whom It May Concern,

I was born in 1937 and from the very first childhood cognizance I was aware of the grim historic shadow of the Great Depression, its memory perpetuated by my parents and my Maori grandmother. The pain of that global misery of personal tragedy was etched on their faces forever.

Contemporaneously the brave and heroic American President Franklin Roosevelt indicted the arrogant Wall St bankers of fraud, put many of them in gaol where most of our contemporary speculating gentlemen should be and reformed the American banking system with the separation of banking powers, "Glass-Steagall".

It is naive of me to believe that you will act on my request to restore this law in Australia where for a short period the Commonwealth Bank reflected the basic principles but let it be known that I am privy to the history of its defilement.

Yours Sincerely,
