

We need a postal bank

Australians need a new postal bank to support large projects to secure our future as a leading nation. The urea shortage is a brilliant example of why manufacturing in Australia needs to be once again supported, without it we're doomed, without our own onshore manufacturing we'll continue to be depended on other nations that have only their best interests at heart, and will run us down.