

Given the current situation with housing affordability, wouldn't it be far wiser to scrap negative gearing?

I cannot understand why the people have to fund investors property purchases whilst we have housing affordability at all time highs.

Franked dividends are unique to the Australian investment community and are also a great benefit to many small businesses across Australia. If it's not broken, don't try and fix it.

---