

Dear Treasurer,

I understand that you intend to introduce a new bill to parliament on franking credits.

Any bill which affects taxation in a retrospective should be treated with caution, as it is generally unfair, and can become a paper nightmare, and come back to bite.

It is also unfair to rush something like this through without giving an adequate explanation flagging who will be affected and time for those possibly affected to absorb the impact and comment

Yours faithfully

Andrew Lee