

Submission in support for post office banks

I , Roger Blakeway fully support the implementation of postal banks. Having been raised in the wheat belt of WA, I saw the long distances we had to travel to the nearest town. Many of these towns no longer have a bank branch. A post office bank is the only way some of these communities will survive. Don't forget, these farmers supply the very things that feed our nation and many other people. This would also break up the monopoly of the big four banks. Remember, the bank that built this country, the commonwealth bank (peoples bank), originally started in the post offices in the early 1900s.
